The Centre for Art Tapes presents an talk by Liz MacDougall, one of three artists from the local community participating in CFAT's Local Artist-in-residence Program. During Liz's one month in residence she began an interactive video and audio installation. She will now present the work-in-progress.

For this piece entitled "Anatomy of a Memory" Liz is taping conversations regarding the nature of trauma and its lingering effects in the mind and in the body. The final work proposed for an installation will explore personal, scientific, cultural and other perspectives on trauma, memory, and the brain.
